Nearly three out of four employees say they're stressed in the office

Chicago Tribune

According to an annual survey by Harris Interactive, 73 percent of Americans are stressed at work.

The top source of stress, felt by 11 percent of survey respondents, is low wages. For women, that rises to 14 percent.

The next irritants are annoying co-workers (10 percent); commuting (9 percent); workload (9 percent); and a job outside a chosen career (8 percent).

But workers' fear of losing their job dropped to 4 percent, from 9 percent in 2011.

CTA riders upset by bus cutbacks

Tracv Swartz

When John Lyons was looking for a place to set up his optical business two years ago, transit access was a top priority He chose his location in West Lakeview because the Lincoln Avenue bus stops near his business, which is about three blocks from the Paulina Brown Line stop.

"We have a very young patient base; they love public transportation," said Lyons, who runs Lyons Family Eye Care at 3250 N. Lincoln Ave. "I'm shocked that Lincoln Avenue, one of the most vibrant streets in Chicago, would be even considered for a stop of [CTA] service."

Lyons is one of more than 400 people, as of Monday morning, who have signed an online petition to "save the No. 11 Lincoln bus."

The CTA last week proposed splitting the No. 11 Lincoln route, which travels along Lincoln Avenue from Skokie to downtown, in half and eliminating service from the Western stop to the Fullerton stop.

The No. 11 is one of 26 routes that are up for total or partial elimination as part of a service change plan the CTA says will boost rail trips in crowded spots and decrease or eliminate service in areas with low ridership. The CTA said the Brown Line is a suitable alternative for the No. 11.

While the No. 11 Lincoln bus saw nearly 5,500 weekday riders last month, the portion that has been targeted for discontinuation sees about 2,500 riders, CTA spokesman Brian Steele said.

Still, 2,500 weekday riders is more riders than 52 of the CTA's 139 bus routes logs (19 of these 52 lines are up for discontinuation). One of these low ridership routes is scheduled to see more service.

Compared to rail, the No. 11 portion up for discontinuation saw more weekday riders last month than all but one Purple Line station and all but one station that solely serves the

On the online petition to save the No. 11 bus, riders wrote of concerns about the elderly and people with disabilities having to walk further to access public transportation. CTA President Forrest Claypool said he's heard mixed reviews from riders since the proposal was introduced last week.

"Obviously, we've received a lot of positive feedback," Claypool said Monday at a press conference about the agency's free rides for Chicago Public Schools students on the first day of school. "There's been some indication of concern."

Claypool said the proposal is not a done deal. The CTA board is expected to vote on the proposal at its monthly board meeting Sept. 12. Changes to the routes would go into effect Dec. 16.

Drew Peterson defense attorney Joel Brodsky talks to reporters outside Will County Courthouse on Monday, MICHAEL TERCHA/TRIBUNE

DREW PETERSON TRIAL

Defense gets its turn

Chicago Tribune

Former Bolingbrook police Sgt. Drew Peterson has always insisted he had nothing to do with the death of his third wife or the disappearance of his fourth.

On Monday, the man who notoriously tried to make his case while joking on the "Today" show began trying to convince a jury of seven men and five women that his third wife, Kathleen Savio, accidentally drowned in her bathtub.

Defense attorneys said they will put on two of their expert forensic witnesses Tuesday to testify that Savio's 2004 death was an accident, which is how authorities initially classified it.

The Peterson family drama may crescendo in court Wednesday, when Thomas Peterson, Drew's son with Savio, is expected to give testimony alleging that his adoptive mother, Stacy, was lying when she told a pastor that Drew Peterson killed Savio and coached her to lie about it.

Thomas Peterson, valedictorian of his 2011 Bolingbrook High School class who is now studying at the University of Pennsylvania, was at his father's home the weekend Savio died. He has told the Tribune he believes her death was an accident.

"He'll be here to support his father and tell what he knows about his father's innocence," defense attorney Joel Brodsky said, "He has a lot of things to add to the story."

On Monday, prosecutors wrapped up their case and a Will County judge denied a defense motion for an acquittal. The defense began calling witnesses Monday, and the state will have an opportunity to call more witnesses later. Adding a strange sidelight to the day's testimony, jurors in the murder trial arrived wearing sports jerseys and T-shirts, prompting jokes and laughter in the courtroom.

Drew Peterson's attorneys first called Savio's neighbor Mary Pontarelli, who had previously testified for the prosecution. She testified Monday that Peterson always seemed like a friendly person who loved to tease and joke around. She testified that she never saw him angry at Savio.

"He's a funny guy. He makes jokes about things, not in a mean way, a fun way," she testified.

Isaac eerily following Katrina's path in Gulf

NEW ORLEANS Tropical Storm Isaac closed in on the Gulf coast Monday, triggering evacuation orders in some areas and disrupting offshore oil production as it threatened to make landfall between Florida and Louisiana as a Category 2 hurricane.

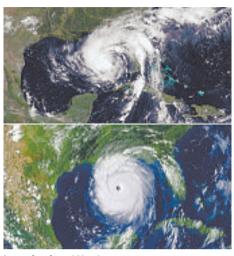

The wide, slow-moving storm swiped south Florida on Sunday and strengthened over the warm Gulf waters. It was expected to reach land late Tuesday or early Wednesday, the anniversary of devastating Hurricane Katrina seven vears ago.

The U.S. National Hurricane Center warned the storm could buffet towns and cities in at least three U.S. states near the shoreline and flood the northern Gulf coast with a storm surge of up to 12 feet in some areas.

"The weather will start going downhill overnight tonight on the northern Gulf Coast," Hurricane Center Director Rick Knabb told reporters. "Wherever it is people are going to be during the storm, they need to get there tonight."

Isaac was forecast to strengthen into a Category 2 hurricane on the five-step Saffir-Simpson scale of hurricane intensity, with top winds of 100 mph, before making landfall and moving over the Gulf Coast.

The storm could take direct aim at New Orleans, which is still struggling to fully recover

Ex-Bear Anthony Adams treats us—and producers?—to some musical stylings

RedEye

Step aside, Greg Olsen former Bear Anthony Adams is brushing up on his rap skills. The defensive lineman has a new video on the heels of "Stuff NFL Free Agents Say" and "Basketball is My First Love," both of which he released in the past few weeks.

Adams' latest effort is the YouTube gem "Rap Is My First Love" in which he dances, orders fast food and lives the "house husband" lifestyle. We'll try to do it justice with this breakdown.

0:03 Adams channels Cee Lo Green, minus the cat. He does have a chair that looks like it spins, but there's no confirmation here. Perhaps in the next

> 0:10 "Minivan Mercy" appears onscreen and a Chrysler Town and Country rolls into a garage to Kanye West's "Mercy." We hear the lyrics about suicide doors and-voila!-the suicide doors on the van open. Points for using Kanye's song in an unexpected spot.

> > Adams, aka 2 A's, finally gives us a taste of his own rap skills. Speaking of food, it's a running theme. "Can't joke with my campaign/ Burger no mayonnaise/ I'm bored and tired at the same time drinkin' orange Tang on an airplane."

> > > We get a peek inside Adams' head. "A lot of people think 2 A's is a gangsta rapper," he says to the camera. "I'm not a gangsta rapper. I just rap about stuff that I do." And unlike some celebrities, he doesn't always talk about himself in the third person. Refreshing!

> > > > 1:37 We're in the studio with Adams, and we find out what's on his kids' menu. "Yeah I feed my daughter peas, feed my son Eggos/ Steppin' on toys, 'Man, pick up these Legos!"

2:00 Back in the studio, clearly he's angling for an endorsement deal with a certain root beer. "I'm sippin' on that Dad's/ Life's a beat/ on a Cinemax movie."

@spiceadams'

ve tackle Anthony Adams

Time for some jewelry shopping at the mall. His son points to a necklace, and Adams takes a liking to it. Guess the kid has good taste.

2:52 All that shopping works up an appetite. But first Adams gets his rhyme on. "2 A's is back/ go to White Castle let me get a 10-sack/ let me get a ketchup pack/ put it on my fries in fact."

Taking his own advice, Adams does, in fact, go to White Castle. It turns out the 10-sack is too much though, and he scales it down to a five-sack. But there's good news: The ketchup packets don't cost extra!

3:17 Adams spins through his favorite foods over Chief Keef's "Don't Like": "Cheeseburgers, that's the stuff I do like/pizza, that's the stuff I do like/salad, that's the stuff I don't like/cookies, that's the stuff I do like/doughnuts, that's the stuff I do like." Then we get four lines of "bang bang!/bang bang!/bang bang!/bang bang!/bang bang!" We're sure getting hungry now.

Adams, who frequently shows off his dance moves in the video, does what looks like the Dirty Bird, just in time for football season. Somewhere, Jamal Anderson is smiling.

4:10 We find Adams in an empty bar. He introduces himself from behind the camera, along with a few ladies. They must be shy or invisible though, as only one appears onscreen.

4:23 Cut to Adams doing karaoke versions of Justin Bieber's "Baby" and the Black-Eyed Peas' "Boom Boom Pow." What, no more "bang bang"?

To close it out, we get Adams' Twitter handle (@spiceadams), followed by a plea to producers, we're guessing: "I would rock shows, you feel me?" Well, do you?

In with the old?

Bears' Tillman, Mannelly have seen enough of replacement referees

Only two players remain on the Bears roster who were around the last time a regular-season game was played with replacement referees, and Brian Urlacher hasn't been available lately to talk about the men in stripes.

The other, long snapper Pat Mannelly, does recall the season opener in 2001, a 17-6 loss at the Super Bowl champion Baltimore Rayens.

"I remember the game," Mannelly said.
"Were they the same caliber of officials we have now? That's what I don't remember. I remember the buzz. Around us, the buzz was it wasn't going to last too long. And here we haven't heard any buzz. I do remember that, 'Oh, it's only going to be a couple weeks.'"

It turned out to be just one week during which the NFL used replacement officials. After taking a weekend off because of the 9/11 tragedies, the league resumed play with its regular officials after brokering a deal.

It is looking more likely by the day that the regular referees will not be around for the start of the regular season. There have been disputed calls in many preseason games and there was a curious play Friday at MetLife Stadium when the N.Y. Giants were given an untimed down at the end of the first quarter after a pass interference penalty against Charles Tillman.

Afterward, Tillman wanted to know if he could be fined for criticizing replacement officials. He mostly kept his mouth shut but he has three pass interference penalties in two games and hasn't been pleased with the work of the newcomers.

Mannelly doesn't remember a whole lot about the fill-ins from 11 years ago.

"I do remember [coach Dick] Jauron talking about it and saying our officials are the best in the world and stuff," Mannelly said. "These guys now are coming into a tough situation. There have been some poor calls but they're learning. I would love to see the [regular] guys back."

Here's hoping the computers are right. The Bears and New England Patriots are predicted to earn their conference's top seeds according to the "Madden NFL 13" regular-season simulation, released Monday. The Bears are predicted to finish 12-4, as are the Green Bay Packers, but the virtual Bears win the NFC North tiebreaker.

Sox take another hit

The White Sox just can't shake injury issues with their pitchers. Gavin Floyd underwent an MRI exam on his right elbow Monday while his teammates were in Baltimore for a weeklong road trip. In all likelihood, Floyd will make his second trip to the disabled list for the problem. John Danks has missed most of the season with an injury, too. Paging Roger Clemens ...

HOT DATE

SEPT. 27 That's when "American Idol" winner Jordin Sparks will sing the national anthem at the Ryder Cup opening ceremonies. The golf tournament itself, pitting the U.S. against Europe, takes place Sept. 28-30 at Medinah Country Club.

Biking fast, fit and stylish

Los Angeles Times

If you're ready to ride a bike for fitness but not ready to hunch over like a Tour de France racer or tackle death-defying single-track trails in the mountains, a single-speed, bulbous-tire beach cruiser won't do. You need a "fitness bike," what the industry now calls the broad category that combines the large, fast-rolling 700-C wheels of road bikes with a tough multi-tread tire and the straight handlebars of a mountain bike. Formerly known as hybrids, these lightweight aluminum-frame bikes have become more refined, stylish and specialized; all work for commuting while sporting varying capabilities for pavement and mild dirt paths. Here are four notable, entry-level 2013. models, each outfitted with mounts for racks and water bottles, and priced so they won't break the bank.

ELECTRA VERSE: The stylish 21-speed fitness road, dirt path and commuter bike combines comfort, performance and classy design

Likes: Sleek good looks with a sweeping top and bottom tubes, hidden internal-frame brake cables and road bike-style caliper brakes. The tall stem puts you in an upright position that makes for comfortable long-distance riding and nimble handling. The Shimano Acera 21-speed drive-train with trigger shifters offers options for flatland speed and hill climbs. Mixed tire tread can handle smooth gravel paths. Includes attachment points for racks. $639 moves you up to 24-speed Alivio. Dislikes: None.

by hassle-averse riders, there's just

SPECIALIZED CROSSTRAIL: A versatile pavement and dirt-path bike with Shimano Altus 24-speed trigger-shifter gearing, light-duty suspension fork with 60 millimeters of travel, tough multi-belt 38-millimeter-wide tires and antinumbness handlebar grips. Likes: Perfect if you ride on the street and well-graded dirt paths. The CrossTrail even got us through some rocky single-track

trails due to its shock and bulletproof knobby tires. Higher-end models add disc brakes, a lock-out on the fork, internally run cables and better components. Dislikes: We would have preferred a higher, mountain-bike-style bottom bracket (pedal axel) for rock clearance and a wider frame spacing to accommodate wider tires. Price: $580 ($630 with disc brakes); specialized.com

Caffeinated cool

FELT CAFÉ 7: A simple, civilized and stylish road or mild trail bike with 7-speed gearing, a coffee cup holder on the handlebar, a kickstand and several fashion and comfort touches.

Likes: It has a rock-solid feel: a comfortable ride, due to tall, swept-back handlebars; and it's loaded with classy touches, including the frame's intricately shaped top tube, stitched synthetic

Trail to commute

TREK 7.2 FX: The all-conditions performance fitness bike for road. trail and commuting comes with 24-speed Shimano Alivio drive-train, puncture-resistant tires and mountain bike-> style V brakes. Likes: Fast, quick and balanced on road and mild dirt paths. Like the Specialized, high-performance position than the Electra or the Felt, plus just enough style (note the red accents) to feel hip. Fender mounts make it a worthy allweather commuter. It's also available in a women's model with altered dimensions. The FX's higher-end models have disc brakes and better components. For more off-road capability, go to the Trek 8 Dual Sport bikes, which have a light suspension fork.

SOUND BOARD

ALBUM REVIEW

AMERICA

America Dan Deacon

By Kyle Kramer

REDEVE SOUNDBOARD
America is a loaded
word, overwhelming, varied and hard to fully comprehend.
It holds different meanings for different people. Naming an album "America" is an automatic (or cheap) way to invoke
this set of complicated ideas.

The third album from Dan Deacon, the oddball indie electronic experimentalist, doesn't exactly discourage this type of discussion. He's made an album that is both immediately jarring and ambitious in its way of turning tinny digital effects into grandiose sonic statements. The possibilities for deconstruction are there. To do this, though, would sell short Deacon's actual mission, which is to create music that is fun in a visceral way. Deacon's shows—go, if you get the chance—ask the audience to let go of themselves and do zany dances. Similarly, this album pushes past a certain comfort zone, often offering a barrage of raw noise that takes a while to reveal itself as an entertaining listen.

It does, eventually, suggesting spiritual peers in bands like Sleigh Bells or My Bloody Valentine, although the music specifically sounds closer to a mix of Animal Collective, Steve Reich and a dying computer. Songs like "Lots," "USA I: Is a Monster," and "USA IV! Manifest" feel triumphant and redemptive, harnessing a stomping middle ground at the intersection of punk, pop, post-rock and electronic dance music.

"America" also is an album in the traditional sense: it really makes the most sense as a complete work, which maybe invites further overblown analysis. While it can veer into gimmicky, video-gamey territory or tepid atmospherics, it's often a crashing success. Which, hey, if you want to connect that to the idea of America more broadly, go ahead, I guess.
